The first was a motivational speech delivered by Dr. Ami H. Shah (Principal, SRPEC) who addressed the gathering and welcomed everyone on behalf of SRPEC. She gave a detailed introduction to the college and guided the students about the various facilities available in the institute for the students. She highlighted the accomplishments of the institute faculty and assured the parents that their children are in safe hands! She emphasized the need for continuous hard work and stressed that getting admission into SRPEC is the starting point and not the end of the journey. Also she told Discipline, punctuality and excellence, these are three principles of our institute. Sometimes we find it difficult to follow discipline and punctuality but as we know if we want to be excellent we have no alternative. And remember what is the difference between success and failure is the difference between exactly right and almost right and together we want to achieve exactly right thing for you and we will surely achieve it.

The second speech given by Prof. H. G. Rajput, academic advisor of SRPEC to young students, and he introduced them to a set of study skills which they ought to carry with them throughout their academic years. The Final was a motivational speech delivered by the Chief guest Dr. M. N. Patel. He spoke of the importance of a higher education, of having a degree. He spoke of the differences between wisdom and knowledge, of the courage and perseverance we must have in facing the situations when life crushes, stamps, and spits on us. Most importantly of all, he asked us to keep in mind the purpose for which we pay fees and attend any educational institute: to learn, not to waste time; we must at all times understand what we learn, and why we are learning it. Clear and direct in
